Cō-Impact Sourcing® initiatives allow dōTERRA to ethically partner with sourcing communities to produce the best products while helping the most. These initiatives cultivate relationships with local distillers, farmers, harvesters, and community leaders so we can ensure our supply chains are empowering people, improving processes, and caring for the planet.

A Cō-Impact Sourcing Story

Tapping Copaiba Tree

dōTERRA sourcing partners work with harvesting families who live along the Amazon River to produce Copaiba essential oil. Each family cares for several trees—a tradition that's been fostered for generations.

Amazon River

Copaiba sourcing supports hundreds of harvesters in these communities who work in harmony with the forest for their livelihoods. A copaiba tree can live up to 400 years and grow more than 100 feet tall. For six months of the year, copaiba trees in the Amazon are inaccessible. But during the rainy season—January to June—the river rises 20 feet or more, making the trees accessible by boat.

Local Harvester

Rural communities in the Amazon are among the most poverty-stricken in Brazil. Working with dōTERRA, harvesting partners from these communities are taught to keep thorough purchase records and negotiate resin selling prices, ensuring they receive a fair payment regularly.
